

DOG ATTACKS POSTMAN.

Fierce Terrier Places Letter Carrier in Embarrassing Position.

A small terrier dog which may have been suffering from distemper attacked Frank J. Shields, a letter-carrier of the Fort Hamilton station while he was delivering mail at Eighty-sixth street and Third avenue, today. The terrier bit the postman in the right leg. The man shook the dog off, but it returned to the attack and this time got away with almost the whole of one trouser leg. Terrified and embarrassed Shields sought refuge in a storm shed and remained there until neighbors drove the dog off and gave him another garment to wear. The dog was captured and chained up.
